Claiming tax entitlements in Denmark

Everything you need to know about filing a tax return

Do I need to file a tax return in Denmark?

The answer to this question depends on your personal circumstances. Most employees in Denmark are required to file a tax return. Even if you're not obliged to file a tax return, by not doing so you risk missing out on your tax refund. The average Danish tax refund is €1,200.

Meanwhile, there are also many circumstances under which you will be required to file, such as:

- You pay taxes in Denmark
- You are self-employed
- You earn rental income
- You have non-Danish sourced income

Who can claim a tax refund in Denmark?

As a general rule you'll be due a refund in the following circumstances:

- You were employed on a limited-term contract in Denmark
- You paid for food and accommodation while working there
- You kept your residence in your home country while working in Denmark

What is the average Danish tax refund?

The average Danish tax refund a Taxback customer receives is €1,200!

So it is definitely worth checking what you're owed.

Can I claim any expenses against my employment income?

Yes. However, in order to be eligible for tax relief, expenses must be "wholly, exclusively, and necessarily" incurred for the employment.

You may be entitled to accommodation and food expenses if:

- Your employment is temporary
- Your place of employment changes (different buildings, for instance)
- Because of the distance between your job and home, you are unable to stay at home

What documents do I need in order to claim a tax refund?

To file your Danish claim, we will need the following:

- Årsopgørelse
- Employment Contracts from all employers
- Permanent Address Registration
- Completed tax pack
- A copy of your ID

What is an Årsopgørelse?

Your Årsopgørelse is the official government document you get from the Danish tax office by May of the following year. It outlines all your earnings, how much you've been taxed and any tax deductions that you have. If you don't have it, it's no problem – our document retrieval team can source it out for you.
